

More From the Wilderness!

I happened upon this Church of Scotland in Kilmartin, Scotland, on the Argyl Peninsula, first thing on Sunday morning, March 26, 2017. I got there at 10:00 am and worship was scheduled to begin at 11:45. Perfect timing! Another serendipitous moment I had not planned, but sensed the presence of God offering my first opportunity to worship at a local “mother church.” I had a cup of coffee at a little cafe and then toured the Kilmartin Museum while waiting for worship to begin.

The distinctive thing about the Kilmartin Glen and the Argyl peninsula are the ancient ruins found throughout. Dating in some cases as far back as 4,000 years, one encounters standing stones, burial cairns, rock art in the form of cup-and-rings, stone circles (the same idea as Stonehenge though not as large), and Fort Dunadd where the coronation of Scottish kings took place centuries ago. And as always the ubiquitous Celtic Cross. Of all the places I visited in Scotland this was probably the most intriguing, mysterious, and puzzling.

Church members with whom I worshiped including the couple on the right who are retired mission co-workers who served many years in Malawi, Africa.

Standing Stones in Kilmartin Glen, Scotland. Erected some 3,200 years ago, they are placed in order to line up with the rising and setting moon and sun at significant times.

The cemetery of the Church of Scotland in Kilmartin, as do nearly all church cemeteries, features numerous Celtic Crosses. The Cross, of course, represents God's great love for people, and the circle represents the “orb of the earth” signifying God's love for all creation.

Let's Give Les and Cindy Morgan a Grand Trinity Welcome!

Please plan to be at Trinity on Sunday evening, April 23, to welcome and hear from PCUSA Mission Co-Workers, Drs. Les and Cindy Morgan. There will be a program beginning at 7:00 pm during which the Morgans will tell us about their work. There will be something for all ages, including Les and Cindy's ability to speak to and include young children. We will have a reception after the program with light refreshments.

The Morgans are on “home-assignment” during which time they try to visit the many congregations with which they have a special relationship. Trinity is somewhat out-of-the-way and they are making a special effort which includes a “400 mile detour” to be with us that evening. So let's have a good turn-out to show them we appreciate their visit with us.

Please stop by the display in the atrium to view information on the Morgans and see pictures in the new photo album.

Great job leading the Easter Sunrise service... everyone did an excellent job! Thank you for being on time and pitching in to get the worship space set up. Rehearsal for Youth Sunday continues! This week we need everyone present on Wednesday for SMASH so that we can rehearse your parts...if we can't get everyone year we will need an extra rehearsal on Saturday evening at 5:00 p.m. On Sunday we will gather at 9:00 a.m. to rehearse and everyone needs to wear all black.
